Programme Overview

Throughout this Media Communications degree, you will have the opportunity to develop your creative and research skills in marketing, creative strategy, PR, journalism and social media management and prepare for success across the thriving communications sector. Learning a vibrant mix of design, research and audience skills geared towards the needs of the communications industries, you will gain experience working on cross-platform campaigns, marketing strategies for audience development needs, social media content, feature articles, blogs, political media making, investigative journalism and even augmented reality trails. You will study online influencers and diverse forms of screen representation, explore the ethics of AI and social media platforms like TikTok, alternative approaches to journalism, emerging marketing practices for immersive experiences, and beyond.

Taught by a team of researchers and creative media strategists and creators, you will learn how to rethink media communications for social change. In your first year, you will be introduced to analytical tools to critique contemporary media, such as gender, race and identity. You will learn graphic design and project development skills, as well as how to research media audiences. In your second year, you will learn marketing, influencer and branding practices, identifying ways of revolutionising how media creators communicate to audiences. You will also learn web design skills, explore grassroots community media, practice cross-platform communication strategies, and increase your awareness of media ethics. In your final year, you will join The Studio, Bath Spa University's city-centre enterprise and innovation hub for creative media technology, where you will have the opportunity to collaborate with local arts creators and businesses on communications campaigns. You will also have the opportunity to engage with Immersive Promotion Design, our in-house immersive marketing company. Learning how immersive media, feminist activism and public events can all shape the future of media communications, you will have opportunities to collaborate, network and co-create media communications content with industry partners across the communications industries, gaining on the ground experience

Programme Aims

1. To prepare students for success across media communications sectors including marketing, journalism and social media.
2. To develop creative skills in designing and producing communications content including cross-platform campaigns, investigative journalism, social media content and promotional press packs.
3. To equip students with the research skills to understand contemporary media audiences and diverse strategies for engaging them.
4. To equip students with the analytical skills to evaluate media ethics, paying particular attention to questions of diversity and inclusivity.
5. To understand the ways in which a myriad of media platforms have developed, with reference to social, cultural and technological change.
6. To promote qualities of citizenship and activism, which will enable graduates to rethink media communications for social change.
7. To provide students with opportunities to collaborate, network and co-create media communications content with industry partners across the media and communications industries, gaining on the ground experience.

Assessment methods

A range of summative assessment tasks will be used to test the Intended Learning Outcomes in each module. These are indicated in the attached assessment map which shows which tasks are used in which modules.

Students will be supported in their development towards summative assessment by appropriate formative exercises.

Please note: if you choose an optional module from outside this programme, you may be required to undertake a summative assessment task that does not appear in the assessment grid here in order to pass that module.

Work experience and placement opportunities

A unique aspect of the Media Communications degree is that students have the chance to collaborate with Immersive Promotion Design, our own in-house immersive marketing company that supports VR and AR creatives to communicate with their audiences. This means that our students get to work on marketing campaigns for emerging VR and AR experiences in the region. All final-year students will also join The Studio, Bath Spa University's city-centre enterprise and innovation hub for creative media technology.

Our final-year Media Communications modules are delivered in collaboration with industry partners, providing students with insight into - and hands-on experience with - some of the most innovative and significant arts, media and communications organisations in the region.

This programme can also be taken as a 'Sandwich' degree, which is studied over 4 years and includes a year-long work placement in a sector of your choice. The placement year is completed between years 2 and 3 of your degree and counts for 120 Level 5 credits. During this time you will be able to utilise knowledge gained as part of your studies in a real work environment to gain 'hands on' experience. The University has a dedicated Careers & Employability team to help you find and prepare for a placement. Following your placement year, you will return to University to complete your final year of study.

Graduate Attributes

	Bath Spa Graduates...	In Film and Media, we enable this...
1	Will be employable: equipped with the skills necessary to flourish in the global workplace, able to work in and lead teams	Employability is embedded in the delivery and assessment of the course. All assessment items adhere to the formats and expectations of real-world communications briefs, such as campaigns and strategy reports. There is significant emphasis on industry interface, especially in Level 5 and 6 modules where students complete live briefs and join in-house industry partnerships.
2	Will be able to understand and manage complexity, diversity and change	Each level is characterised by a set of learning outcomes, which ensure progression in students' ability to recognise, critique and challenge issues of diversity and inclusion and their relationships to the media.
3	Will be creative: able to innovate and to solve problems by working across disciplines as professional or artistic practitioners	Creative innovation is the bedrock of the course: all modules are designed to enable students to design, research, produce and reflect on creative media content that reflects industry practices through a social and political lens.
4	Will be digitally literate: able to work at the interface of creativity and technology	Digital literacy is central to the employability of the course: students will develop key skills in graphic and web design from L4, building towards cutting-edge technologies such as augmented reality at L6.
5	Will be internationally networked: either by studying abroad for part of their programme, or studying alongside students from overseas	Erasmus and study abroad arrangements are in place and increasing numbers of students apply to study abroad every year. In recent years, overseas exchange students have been attending Film and Media courses in greater numbers, most often from the USA, EU and Australia, and this significantly enriches the quality of peer learning in the classroom.

6	Will be creative thinkers, doers and makers	Creative thinking is central to the ethos of the course: students are empowered to draw on relevant research to inform their creative media practice, and in turn rethink media communications practices.
7	Will be critical thinkers: able to express their ideas in written and oral form, and possessing information literacy	The learning outcomes at every level emphasise the importance of critical and conceptual understanding of subject matter. The ability to communicate these ideas by using professional written and oral communications skills including reports, feature articles and pitch presentations.
8	Will be ethically aware: prepared for citizenship in a local, national and global context	A focus on media ethics is explicit throughout the course, as is a focus on glocal media contexts and specific issues of race, gender, diversity and inclusivity
